Stone Farm, Chagford, Devon TQ13 8JU

Stone Lane Gardens is an enchanting 5-acre woodland gardens on the edge of the Dartmoor National Park, famous for a National Collection of Birch and Alder trees and Annual Sculpture Exhibition.

By 1992, June felt that the gardens would be an ideal backdrop for open air sculpture and the annual exhibition was 'born' and continues to flourish. The Ashburner prize builds on this legacy.

Three years after founding, in 1995, Plant Heritage awarded the gardens its 'National Collection' status in recognition of the importance of the diversity and rarity of its trees. And in 2015 Plant Heritage further awarded the gardens 'Scientific Status' in acknowledgement of the great work Kenneth Ashburner had done to extend and promote knowledge of the species, work that still continues today.

Or recharge at the café with a traditional Devon cream tea or tuck into a slice of cake.
