

Dartmoor is a magical landscape where sweeping panoramas rise up to the sky and breathtaking views stretch all around. The colours change as the light and the seasons change, and when the gorse and heather burst into bloom it is streaked with gaudy mauves and yellows.

And those dramatic skies - where clear cerulean blue can be dotted with towering white clouds, or a sudden change can bring scudding greys drifting over the jagged tors.

Our Dartmoor Explorer is the best way to enjoy the majesty and grandeur of this amazing place, with grandstand views all around from the top deck.

Use this leaflet to plan your adventure. Hop off wherever takes your fancy and explore...

Dartmoor Ponies

Ponies have lived on Dartmoor since prehistoric times and although herds roam freely, they all belong to different keepers. They are hardy and thrive on Dartmoor despite the harsh winters, and their grazing helps support wildlife.

When Dartmoor was designated a National Park, in 1951, the pony was chosen to be its logo.

It's against the law to feed them and can be dangerous for both them and you!

TWO BRIDGES

North east of Princetown is where the two roads that cross Dartmoor meet. One is the old turnpike road which was built across the moor in the late 18th century and which our tour follows.

The name doesn't refer to the two bridges that you see today. In 1765 the road crossed both the West Dart and the River Cowsic, just upstream from where they meet, and therefore required two separate bridges.

By 1891, there was just a single bridge further downstream over the West Dart. A more modern structure has been added alongside its earlier predecessor, hence the confusion!

A mile or so north of the Two Bridges Hotel is an amazing strange group of stunted oak trees growing among moss and lichen covered granite boulders, and it's a nice walk there.

The hotel was built in 1794 as a lonely Dartmoor coaching inn, but then it was called the Saracen's Head.

POSTBRIDGE

Just a short walk from the National Park Visitor Centre is one of the best examples of a clapper bridge; indeed, one of the finest in the country.

It's believed to date back to medieval times and would probably have replaced stepping stones to help packhorses cross the river. The bridge has two central piers spanned by three large granite slabs, or clappers.

The word clapper is thought to derive from the Anglo-Saxon word 'cleaca', meaning stepping stones, or 'bridging the stepping stones'.

tales of the unexpected

When thick mists suddenly roll across the moor, when mires appear dark and bottomless and brooding granite tors look menacing on the horizon, it's no wonder the sweeping lonely landscapes of Dartmoor stir the imagination. Then legends have substance and the blood can run cold.

Stories of pixies, ghosts, witchcraft and weird happenings have been passed down over the centuries. Some are explained away quite easily while others still remain a mystery to this day.

MORETONHAMPSTEAD

The gateway to the High Moor - you can see the moor from the town - Moretonhampstead has a history stretching back to Saxon times, and in the 18th century became a major coaching stop for travellers between Exeter and Plymouth.

Take the town trail to discover fine buildings such as the Alms Houses and the Parish Church of St Andrew. And pop into the several studios and galleries to see works by local artists and craftsmen.

You'll find the arts and heritage centre in the former primary school and what used to be the bus depot in the town is now a motor vehicle museum with over 150 vintage and classic vehicles. The viewable restoration workshop makes it more than just a museum.

PLYMOUTH

Known as Britain's Ocean City, Plymouth has a seafaring heritage going back centuries.
Wander along to Plymouth Hoe to see the iconic Smeaton's Tower lighthouse and where Sir Francis Drake played bowls before setting off to quash the Spanish Armada.

Head down to the Barbican, where a bustling array of specialist shops, restaurants, cafés and great attractions are set against the backdrop of Plymouth's picturesque harbour.

Or go to Sutton Harbour
to visit the famous Plymouth Gin Distillery
or the National Marine Aquarium.

The modern city centre is spacious and
pedestrian friendly,
and lined with shops
of all descriptions.

EXETER

The story of the city goes back to pre-Roman times and, despite being bombed heavily during the Second World War, much of that history is still there to be experienced.

There are fascinating attractions, like its unique underground passages, free Red Coat guided tours to go on, the remains of an imposing Roman wall and an historic Quayside. You can learn more about the history of Exeter in the award-winning Royal Albert Memorial Museum and get a grandstand view of the city from our open-top Discover Exeter bus tour - it runs hourly and you can just hop on and off wherever takes your fancy. The route is shown below.

Perhaps Exeter's crowning glory is its magnificent cathedral with a breathtaking vaulted nave that is poetry in stone. The Cathedral Green surrounding it is a peaceful oasis in this busy city.

Exeter has excellent shopping with many favourite
High Street names, but head to the West Quarter or the cobbled Gandy Street to discover some great independent cafés.
